

The Inquirer Digital DAILY NEWS Digital

philly.com

He raced for the cure - of redistricting process

May 10, 2011 | By MARY MAZZONI, mazzonm@phillynews.com
215-854-5880

He must really hate gerrymandering.

A Radnor Township man yesterday completed a 1,000-mile run around the state, battling fatigue, harsh weather and heavy traffic to inspire reform of upcoming state and federal redistricting - the rearrangement of legislative districts after each census.

Paul Mathison, 51, who set off on April 1, said he began his one-lap trek around the state, dubbed the PennUltimate Run, because redistricting is crucial to fair elections.